The Millennial Challenge: Policy and Intergenerational Dialogue

When: March 6\textsuperscript{th} 2014
Where: EC, Crawford Hall
Time: 7pm-8pm

Who are the Millennial generation and what do we know about their needs other than constant and full wireless bandwidth? This forum is part of a campus-wide discussion about Millennials, those born after 1980, who face a host of economic and social challenges such as college debt, under and unemployment, and delayed timelines for marriage and family.

The League of Women Voters of Morris County along with The Center for Civic Engagement at Drew, Dr. Susan Rakosi Rosenbloom’s Public Sociology Class and Dr. Lisa Brenner’s Senior Theater Capstone, will host a policy discussion and intergeneration talkback about the Educational and Healthcare issues shaping the choices and opportunities facing Millennials.

The forum is in conjunction with the play “Too Big” (April 23\textsuperscript{rd}-26\textsuperscript{th} at Drew) which is based on student interviews with Millennials throughout New Jersey and depicts their struggle to find meaning, identity and place in the American landscape.

For information please contact:
engage@drew.edu