Research
Grant &
Research

Award of Digital Humanities Mini-Grant from Drew University, Madison, NJ, January 2, 2018

Award of the Open Rank Research Grant from the Yale Center for Faith and Culture at Yale Divinity School which is funded by the John Templeton Foundation in the amount of $25,000.00.

The grant is used to examine the plight of Korean comfort women who were forced into sexual slavery by the Imperial Japanese Army during World War II and the work of activists and scholars for the justice of Korean comfort women. I traveled to Maryland, California, Florida, Japan and S Korea to gather relevant resources and interview activists and scholars to illustrate how they helped turn shame of Korean comfort girls into joy. My research findings will be incorporated into a book, Theology of Joy.

I interviewed the following activists, scholars, and former comfort women and representatives of various organizations for my research on justice of Korean comfort women:

Nov 7-9 Travel to Tampa, FL

Interviewed Ms. Dongwoo Lee Hahm, First President, Washington Coalition for Comfort Women Issues, Inc., Potomac, MD, November 7, 2017

Machado (Union Theological Seminary), Kwok Pui Lan (Episcopal Divinity School), Omid Safi (Duke University), and Santiago Slabodsky (Claremont School of Theology).

The Forum Description

The tragic realities of racism in the United States--most recently embodied in the events in Ferguson--remind us about the dangers of the myth of a "post-racial" America. Recognizing that "race" today encompasses complex social realities far beyond the black-white dichotomy that has historically characterized race relations in the U.S., the Status of Racial and Ethnic Minorities in the Profession Committee has invited a diverse panel of distinguished scholars to reflect on the future of American democracy through the lens of racial and ethnic particularity in order to articulate a road map for future engagement that emphasizes social justice and reconciliation.
