DREW CLASSNOTES

Claire (Dresner) Newman
joins the many in our class that have been shot—that is, have gotten one or two vaccinations for COVID-19. Her daughter-in-law’s father contracted the virus at 91 but survived, thankfully. Claire’s son works at Walter Reed and her daughter lives in Texas. Claire volunteers her lawyering skill to help bring justice for abused children.

Paul Stone
enjoys the rural life. He and Nancy raise vegetables in their garden. Paul has to somewhat limit his farming activity because of heart problems, but that doesn’t stop him from fishing and, via a special arrangement with authorities, he can hunt from his truck. They have four children, six grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

Audrey (Chapin) Svensson is doing well but Sten is having trouble getting his hips working as he would like. He had one replaced and is now facing having the second one done. That has not kept him from doing the grocery shopping. According to Audrey he zooms up one aisle and down the next, astutely managing to get everything on the list. They lost a friend to the COVID-19 onslaught. He apparently could not avoid going out to restaurants for the whole period when social distancing was recommended. Audrey is still committed to the DAR and the Colonial Dames. She is in charge of the book committee and sends out letters monthly with lists of recommended books.

Connie (Cappé) Williams
has temporarily halted therapy for her leg problems because she is about to undergo a treatment to numb the intense pain she is suffering in her back. She fell on Labor Day and compressed some vertebrae. Mo’s grandson, age 40, spent ten days in the hospital with COVID-19, but healed completely.

Carl Verrasio C’60, P’93
grapevine@aol.com
I can’t believe it! It looks like the Class of ’60 allowed a little thing like a pandemic to slow them down. It would appear that nobody did anything last year but hunker down and quarantine at home. Even the peripatetic Headleys and Nancy Marshall Stroh stayed home for a change. Not surprisingly, they are among the few brave souls breaking out from their self-imposed isolation and hitting the road. Nancy and family are planning a weekend on Chincoteague Island in Virginia. She’s looking forward to plenty of outdoor activities and great seafood! You will find her these days relaxing with the Phillies spring training baseball. The Headleys, Peter C’59 and Jodi Della-Cerra, are taking their first flight in two years to visit their son in Las Vegas. What, no motorcycle? These wild and crazy octogenarians are celebrating their 61st wedding anniversary this year. (Let’s have a chorus of Gilbert and Sullivan’s “Oh bliss oh rapture unforeseen.”) Best wishes, guys.

Norman MacArthur
reports that he and Bill are looking forward to the relaxation of COVID-19 restrictions, even though it probably means they won’t get around to finishing War and Peace once restaurants and movie theaters reopen. They, like all of us, are tired of lockdowns, masks, social distancing, searching for vaccines, and having no direct contact with friends.

Bob Bredin’s message HOT OFF THE PRESS is short and inspirational: “It took me sixty years to obtain this goal, but I finally got back to my Drew-days weight. And don’t it feel good!” Carl, your lonely secretary (hint), is within five pounds of his college weight, but sadly his thirty-eight inch chest has slowly drifted downward and his twenty-eight inch waist is a distant memory. (Somewhere if you spell out the numbers, it doesn’t seem as bad.)

Nicki Nock Ridenour
has endured an annus horribilis. The retirement community where she lives went into shutdown mode when the virus hit. She was unable to see her husband, who was in a separate facility because of declining health and COVID-19, for several months. In late autumn she was allowed short visits, but sadly he passed away in December. Her faith, her church work, and her two daughters helped to sustain her during this dark time. Her indomitable spirit will serve her well as the healing process progresses.

Elaine Norris Verrasio and I did most of our quarantining on Long as we shuttled back and forth between North Jersey and South Jersey. It was strange in a frightening and mysterious way to be on a deserted highway. Many summer people became full-time residents of the island, because it was just easier to quarantine there—and the ocean was a pleasant diversion. I retreated into a cocoon insulated from reality by Mozart, Jane Austen, foreign films (thank you Netflix), and art — truly a man born after his time. Elaine, ever the optimist, somehow found comfort in politics. “Nobody’s Perfect.” She became addicted to mystery writers like Amanda Cross, Ngaio Marsh, and Ruth Rendell. Oh, yes, she got out her old sewing machine and made designer face masks for paramedics during the pandemic. Smugly certain that the world is really going to value her tailoring skills.

The plan is for another report this summer, but in the meantime, Neal says he will keep his blog going, though not back to normal, perhaps you could share with us what you are doing and what fun you are having with your solo boarders during this trying time. Read any good books? seen any good films? Met any new friends? write down even a few lines and I will start sharing some of Neal’s stories in much shorter time intervals.

neighbors, and complete strangers as they of their house. The interactions with friends, world walking by on the sidewalk in front of Grandma and nanny until COVID-19 hit. Due to a health condition that led to her early retirement in 2012, Taffy had to leave her son’s house in March 2020, as both he and his wife work in hospitals. Max, 41, is a clinical advisor and neuropsychologist at Montefiore Hospital. Alyss is a neuropsychologist at CHOP; the Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia. Taffy moved into one of classmate Alan Lindy’s apartment complexes last spring in Huntington Valley, Pennsylvania, and it is very happy there. It backs up to a 10-mile trail, and Taffy enjoys walking and hiking every day and doing daily yoga practice. Once she regained her health in 2014, Taffy started working part-time supervising students for St. Joseph’s University and teaching at-risk students for a private school psychologist. That stopped in March 2020, and Taffy hopes it will resume again in September 2021. The other highlight of 2020 for Taffy was her daughter Caitlin’s marriage to Gil Deuk at August 30, 2020. It was a lovely, albeit small and masked celebration, pandemic-style. Caitlin is the chief development officer at Cancer Research Fund (CRF) in New York. She and her husband live in Manhattan. Key Kathy Stone-Laska got a C77. T37 came out of retirement to lead a Presbyterian congregation through the aftermath of a church-wide conflict. Before retirement, Kathy specialized in working with churches recovering from conflict, misunderstand, or malfeasance. Her doctor of ministry degree earned from Drew Theological School built her capacity for this work. Kathy and husband, Frank, have a son, Jacob, who after earning his doctorate in marine biology, embarked on his career as a sea turtle molecular biologist. Jake recently married the love of his life, Erin. Kathy was thrilled to officiate their wedding ceremony. Erin is a civil engineer, and Kathy and Frank love everything about her. Kathy’s husband, Frank, has just retired again. In May 2020, he re-entered the fray to fight the pandemic as an emergency room physician. Now that vaccines are available, he’s feeling okay about hanging up his stethoscope. Eugene Linamny was four months post-surgery in March 2021. Being retired, he has plenty of time to continue volunteer activities, which include work with the Crohn’s and Colitis Foundation; mycrohnsandcolitis.com, a website serving IBD patients; and the OLLI senior education program at Eckerd College. Eugene’s wife, Daisy, is busier than ever, reporting traffic on the radio by day, and playing music the rest of the time. Musical gigs are slowly starting to resume. She is back playing Christine McVie in a Fleetwood Mac tribute band, and just joined “another”

Michael Robert earned a doctorate in education from the University of South Carolina and successfully defended his dissertation, Building Community Among International Students Through Permanently Selected of Fictitious Literature, on March 29, 2021. Our classmate Omar Rodriguez-Graham has been selected to receive the 2021 Alumni Achievement Award in the Arts. It was presented on Zoom on Saturday, June 5, 2021 at 10 a.m.

Annenearie E. (Mayer) Dunleavy has been promoted to senior counsel at Bracelaw LLP. Annearie is based at the firm’s New York office. She represents lenders and borrowers in a range of secured and unsecured financial arrangements with a focus on the energy industry. Prior to joining Bracelaw, she served as in-house counsel for a publicly traded midstream oil and gas master limited partnership and for a renewable power generation company. She earned an MBA, summa cum laude, from American University Kogod School of Business, and a JD, cum laude, from American University Washington College of Law, where she was editor-in-chief of the American Law Review.

Michael DeLoreto is the winner of the 2021 Alumni Achievement Community Volunteer Award. The Zoom presentation took place on Sunday, June 13, 2021 at 1 p.m. On the professional side of his life, Mike was recently promoted to director at Gibbons P.C. in Newark. He previously served as chief of staff to the deputy majority leader of the New Jersey General Assembly, and as the director of government affairs for one of New Jersey’s largest trade associations. See page 6.

Joseph Lombardo recently co-produced Women in Precipitous, a short documentary on women in the sport of powerlifting, with Chris Poulad of Precission Video Solutions. The film is just under 30 minutes and free to access via Vimeo. Joseph and Chris hope to use the documentary to raise funds for a women-led nonprofit, Pull Your Heart Out, which seeks to challenge the narrative of women in strength sports.

Erica (Palmeri) Staito is a partner at Staito. Kim Baldino is engaged! She and her new fiancé both work as UK doctors. They had been planning a trip to Italy that was canceled due to the pandemic. They were finally able to go away to one of their favorite destinations, Disney World, where they then-boyfriend proposed at the Italian pavilion in Epcot. See photo, page 7.

Maximilian Stainted was married in November 2019 to Jordan Rundell, at the New York apartment of a dear friend. They celebrated with their immediate family that weekend at some of their favorite restaurants in Manhattan. See photo, page 6.

Olivia E. (Bouma) VanderVeen is set to begin fellowship training in pediatric nephrology at Penn State Children’s Hospital in the spring of 2021.

Bridget McIlory has been selected to receive the 2021 Alumni Achievement Award in the Arts. It was presented on Zoom on Saturday, June 5, 2021 at 10 a.m. on Vimeo. Joseph and Chris hope to use the documentary to raise funds for a women-led nonprofit, Pull Your Heart Out, which seeks to challenge the narrative of women in strength sports.

THE THEOLOGICAL SCHOOL

Nicole Harris T’18 was sworn in as president of the NAACP in Schenectady, New York, effective February 2021.

THE CAPSERSCHOOL

Dr. Charles McCollough C’65 produced his tenth book in March 2021, Future, Power, and Prayer (We the Soul). The introduction studies his growing up in Lower Branchwater, Texas, and then his search for faith through 12 years of higher education. Charles is also an artist and his books use his drawings and sculptures to embody meaning. Debra Moody-Bass C’78, G’80 is the recipient of the College Alumni Association’s 2021 Francis B. Sollers Award. It was presented via Zoom on Saturday, June 12 at 12:30 p.m. Debra also released another volume of her most recent book in February 2021. It is Lessons from the Bible, Volume 2: Matthew–Revelation. The first volume was released in 2019. She also published an article, The Bible and Human Equality, in the October 2020 issue of Feminist, United Theological Seminary’s online magazine. Susan McFadden C’85 recently published the book Jamaica-Friendly Communities: Why We Need Them and How We Can Create Them, to reflect on the origins and ways of the dementia-friendly movement.” Susan retired from her position as professor of psychology at University of Wisconsin Oshkosh in 2012. In 2012, she also co-founded a nonprofit organization that has brought dementia-friendly programs and practices to northeast Wisconsin. For the next six years, she continued to teach part-time while conducting research with graduate and undergraduate students. In 2018, she turned to book writing, while still volunteering in numerous capacities with the Fox Valley Memory Project. Now that the book has been published, she is continuing to support efforts to bring joy and meaning to people living with dementia.

Marc DiPaolo G’02, ’04 has completed his 10th book, Fueled Italian: A 63% True Autobiography with Bordighera Press. At this writing, it is slated for release in May 2021. See photo, page 8.

Katie (Delucia) Paine C’04 started a new position in August 2020 as the director of development for the Institute for Municipal Studies Pennsylvania. She relocated to Pennsylvania’s Lehigh Valley with her husband, Jameson, and their son, Brodie. 3. They are excited to be closer to family members in the Philadelphia region, including Julian (Pain) Brennan C’04 and Jim Pain C’71, T’74.

Remembering Joyce Bailey: Rooted, Innovative, and Courageous

Joyce grew up in Jamaica. Her life of Christian service blossomed into an international theological career with her decision to attend New York University, and then in earning a doctoral degree at Princeton University. She became an assistant professor of Christian education at the Drew Theological School in the 1970s, serving as the School’s first Caribbean and Black scholar. She also became the first director of the Christian Education Research Center at Drew.

Joyce returned to the Caribbean and served the United Theological College of the West Indies and the Methodist Church in the Caribbean, developing curriculum for the Caribbean Conference of Churches.

Joyce inspired many. One colleague, Assistant Professor Athos Spanier-Miller, credits Joyce with having “harnessed the veil” and kept the dream of Athos’s own doctoral studies alive.

Joyce’s legacy of service, inspiration, and encouragement to others will live on in the form of the recently established Dr. Joyce Bailey award for academic excellence and community participation at the Theological School. Joyce’s family members describe the award as a living memorial to the many contributions Joyce made wherever God planted her.

Drew Mourns the Loss of Diana Baldwin Dunnun

Diana’s grandfather, Arthur Baldwin, and her great-uncle, Leonard Baldwin, founded Drew’s undergraduate Brothers College. Her father then served as chairman of the University’s Board of Trustees. Diana continued her family’s charitable legacy, serving as president of the Baldwin Foundation, through which she and her family have enhanced the Drew experience for many in countless ways—she of which is the Baldwin Honors Program, established in 2009.

Diana’s family members extend their heartfelt sympathies to the family and friends of Diana Baldwin Dunnun. She was deeply loved.
